OUR HISTORY

An oil painting in the Gull's Nest Lounge uses fallen timbers and dark skies to portray an uncompleted hotel complex on the shores of Lake Michigan during the mid-1960's. The "ruins in Two Rivers" dates to 1964 when a Madison based company called "Lake Michigan Properties" announced that they would build a hotel complex in the city. The luxurious plans included an 80-guest room complex with swimming pool, massive dining hall for some 600 guests, cocktail lounge, patio dining overlooking Lake Michigan, gazebos on the beach, meeting rooms, 3000 square feet of professional offices, a barber shop and a beauty salon.

The hotel, named THE TWO RIVERS LODGE, would span 524 feet along the shore at a cost of nearly 1 million dollars (1964). The groundbreaking on May 8, 1965 is said to have included: a ribbon cutting by Governor Warren Knowles, a parade with marching bands, American Legion color guard and bugle corps, Miss Two Rivers, and a fleet of commercial fishing tugs lined up off the shore during the event. A few months later, with over $370,000 in work completed, it was uncovered that no final mortgage for the complex had ever been secured. Lake Michigan Properties walked away from the venture leaving a shell of a building behind.

Six years later James and Barbara Van Lanen, real estate developers, met with Seymour Althen, a local reporter, to tour the ruins. Looking beyond the fallen rubble at the site, Van Lanen said, "This location is perfect." In late 1972, the portions of the construction which were deteriorating from the weather were demolished, and portions which still met strict inspection were salvaged.

The enthusiasm and hard work of the Van Lanen's had brought new life to the project. On July 20, 1973, the Carlton on the Lake (now the Lighthouse Inn) opened its doors for business. Over 53 years later, four members of the Van Lanen family work in the day-to-day operation of the Lighthouse Inn: James Van Lanen (retired), Jim Van Lanen Jr, Laura and Jeff Werner.
